food trace

A SUMMARY FOR THE PERSON WHO SIGNS IT OFF

Supplier compliance, sorted. From £300 a month.

Food Trace Ready to Run puts supplier approval, certificates, allergen specs, audits and corrective actions in one place. It is live the same day, with no setup fee and no IT project.

This brochure answers the questions a managing director usually asks: what it costs, what it protects, whether suppliers will use it, whether auditors accept it, and who else trusts it.

WHY IT MATTERS

The risk sits in your supplier file

Every food business depends on its suppliers' certificates, specifications and allergen declarations being current. When that lives in spreadsheets and inboxes, one lapsed certificate can go unnoticed until an auditor or a customer finds it.

A failed audit

Out-of-date supplier documents are a common audit finding, and a non-conformance puts your certification at risk.

A recall

An allergen change at a supplier that never reached your specs can mean product off the shelf.

A lost listing

Retailers expect a supplier file they can trust. Gaps put the listing, not just the audit, at risk.

THE HIDDEN COST OF SUPPLIER ADMIN

100 suppliers × 5 documents a year × 15 minutes chasing each one =

125 hours a year

That is more than three working weeks of a skilled person's time spent on reminders and inbox searches.

Illustrative example. Your numbers will vary.

Food Trace chases expiring certificates automatically, keeps every approval decision on record, and gives you one current view of every supplier. Your team gets those weeks back.

WHAT YOU GET

Everything for supplier compliance, in one system

Every module is included in the one price. There are no add-ons to buy and no per-user fees.

Supplier onboarding

Suppliers complete a structured profile and upload their own certificates.

Supplier approval

Approve or send back, with a reason and a full record of every decision.

Risk assessment

Rate each supplier's risk and see what extra checks it needs.

Certificate expiry alerts

Automatic reminders at 60, 30 and 7 days before expiry, and on expiry.

Allergens and specifications

Product specs and allergen declarations in one place, with review history.

Supplier questionnaires

Send SAQs, review the answers and track when each one is due again.

Audits on a phone or tablet

Audit on site, even without signal. Answers sync when you are back online.

Corrective actions

Raise non-conformances, collect the supplier's evidence, then close or send back.

Document control

SOPs, policies and certificates stored centrally, with expiry alerts.

Recipe builder, alerts and tasks

Build recipes from approved ingredients, track food alerts and assign follow-ups.

YOUR QUESTIONS, ANSWERED

What decision makers ask us

“Will our suppliers actually fill it in?”

They have to. A supplier is not approved until they have completed their profile and uploaded their certificates, so no approval means no supplying. Suppliers get an email with their login and fill it in from any browser, on a phone or a computer, with nothing to install. After that, Food Trace chases them automatically whenever a certificate is about to expire.

“Will our auditor accept it?”

Food Trace is built around supplier approval and monitoring: risk assessment, approval decisions with reasons, questionnaires, certificate expiry, audits and corrective actions, all with a full record of who did what and when. We will walk your auditor through it.

“We already pay a food safety consultant.”

Keep them. Your consultant gets their own free login and works inside Food Trace with you, so the time you pay them for goes on advice, not on chasing paperwork.

“We don’t have time to move everything across.”

You don’t have to. Send us your existing supplier spreadsheet and we load it into Food Trace for you, for a one-off fee.

“Is our data safe, and is it ours?”

Every customer has their own database, never shared with anyone else. Food Trace is hosted on Microsoft Azure, all traffic is encrypted, and logins can be protected with two-factor authentication.

“I just have one question. Do I need a demo?”

No. Email sales@traceallglobal.com with your question and we will answer by email, with no call needed.
